

Plan for Dissemination 2

Potential advisors in the field of youth, unemployment, and social exclusion politics will be drawn from: core policy-makers, specialist intermediary actors in linking the policy and public domains (political parties and employers associations and trade unions but also supranational organizations like the International Labour Office), and the pro-welfare movements, movements of unemployed and their civil society allies (e.g. civil rights groups, women's groups, poverty action). Our stated intention is to inform our advisors of the progress of the research as it unfolds and in turn have them inform the research itself.